Project on Gun Violence and Illicit Small-Arms Trafficking from a Gender Perspective

Funded by the European Union
(CFP 2018/2011)

This Compendium was prepared in the framework of the “Project in Asia and the Pacific on Gun Violence and Illicit Small Arms Trafficking from a Gender Perspective” developed and implemented by the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (UNRCPD). The Compendium reflects the content and outcomes of three sub-regional workshops for South Asia, Southeast Asia and the Pacific, respectively. These programmes were conducted over the period of July 2018 – March 2020 with the participation of Non-governmental Organizations (NGOs) focused on gender issues and women’s empowerment, as well as members of parliament engaged in security and disarmament. These workshops culminated in a regional Seminar for Asia and the Pacific in March 2020.

The sub-regional workshops in South Asia and Southeast Asia were funded by the United Nations Trust Facility Supporting Cooperation on Arms Regulation (UNSCAR). The sub-regional workshop in the Pacific, the Regional Seminar and this Compendium were funded by the European Union.

1. Introduction

Illicit trafficking of SALW affects numerous States in the Asia-Pacific region, many of which continue to experience relatively high levels of gun violence. Following the call by multiple UN General Assembly and Security Council resolutions since 2000, the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (UNRCP) has sought to further arms-control objectives by strengthening women's participation in preventing and combating illicit trade in small arms and light weapons (SALW). With the aim of promoting gender-responsive efforts to combat the uncontrolled spread of and enhance national control over SALW and to prevent gun-violence, UNRCPD implemented a region-wide project on 'Gun Violence and Illicit Small Arms Trafficking from a Gender Perspective'. This project was designed for women leaders of Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) focused on gender issues/women's empowerment, and for Members of Parliament (MPs) engaging in arms-control issues. The project had the following five activities:

- 1) Sub-regional workshop for Southeast Asia;
- 2) Sub-regional workshop for South Asia;
- 3) Sub-regional workshop for the Pacific;
- 4) Regional seminar for Asia and the Pacific; and
- 5) Compiling outcomes of the events in the Compendium

The primary goal was to enhance the understanding on the impacts that illicit SALW trafficking and gun violence has on women, girls, men and boys for NGOs and MPs in the region. Project activities aligned with Sustainable Development Goal 16¹ on promoting peaceful and inclusive societies, (Target 16.4²) and Goal 5³ on gender equality (Targets 5.2 and 5.5⁴). The project aimed to enrich on-going discussions and decision-making on SALW control from a gender perspective, through raising participants' awareness on the instruments which support SALW control, with a focus on the United Nations Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in SALW in All Its Aspects (PoA) and the Arms Trade Treaty (ATT). It further sought to empower NGOs to carry out advocacy, awareness-raising, and education initiatives on SALW-control by applying their own gender perspective to these issues. The workshops intended to provide NGOs in Asia and the Pacific focused on gender and women's empowerment with the opportunity to network, share ideas and strategies, and develop cooperation with MPs. In order to achieve these goals, experts from the United Nations Office for Disarmament Affairs (UNODA), UN Women, International Action Network on Small Arms (IANSA), Parliamentary Forum on SALW (PFSALW) and the Centre for Arms Violence Reduction (CAVR) were invited and engaged in discussions on arms control and gender related issues.

The linkage between the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG)⁵⁶ and SALW

The 2030 UN Agenda for Sustainable Development creates a nexus between maintaining peace and security and achieving development goals. During the three sub-regional workshops, participants and experts discussed the interlinkages between illicit SALW and key SDGs. Goal 5 on gender equality (targets 5.2 and 5.5) and Goal 16 on promoting peaceful and inclusive societies (targets 16.1 and 16.4) were most relevant to this project. In this context, the participants also received an introduction to the Agenda for Disarmament "Securing Our Common Future"⁷, launched by the UN Secretary-General in May 2018. The Agenda outlines a set of practical measures across an entire range of disarmament and arms control issues, with conventional arms being the focus of Pillar II "Disarmament that Saves Lives" and Pillar IV "Strengthening partnership for disarmament" The Agenda advocates for, inter alia, gender-responsive disarmament and arms-control policies.

The project activities have enhanced the capacities of NGOs in several ways, including more meaningful participation in discussions on SALW control; developing ideas to initiate advocacy and awareness-raising efforts to combat illicit SALW trade; and enhancing national SALW control, through training and practical exercises. Activities included open discussions, specific thematic sessions and experts' presentations, enhancing their understanding of the gendered impacts of gun violence, and familiarization with existing arms-control mechanisms. Discussions pertaining to the international arms control regime were focused primarily on national implementation of the PoA, as well as the ratification/accession and implementation of the ATT. The project has contributed to increased capacity among women's organizations to inform and influence their governments, in order to improve national, regional and international policies and practices on armed violence reduction and small arms control.

This Compendium draws upon the knowledge shared by the experts and input provided by the participants. Primarily this document is designed to provide the participants with a collection of data, and summary of the action points and recommendations gathered. The Compendium includes a summary of ideas for joint initiatives between MPs and NGOs, which can be used to inspire further discussions and engagements and to provide practical guidance to NGOs and MPs on how to address illicit small arms trafficking and armed violence.

The workshops were structured into different thematic Sessions, which are reflected in the titles of the next chapter "Lessons learned". This compendium presents every thematic topic in two pages: Highlights from all four events and Key Insights summarizing regional commonalities, challenges and recommendations.

2. Lessons learned

2.1 Gender and Armed Violence

2.1.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important notes to remember:

Currently strong gender constructions and dimensions of gun ownership, use and misuse are existing worldwide and within the Asia-Pacific Region.

Weapons are power-less without ammunition, which makes it crucial to consider ammunition in disarmament engagements.

Direct consequences:

The presence of SALW facilitates and perpetuates violence against women. Such violence takes many forms including: murder, intimidation, rape, torture and forms of GBV like: sexual abuse, sexual harassment, threats and humiliation, forced prostitution, and trafficking of women and girls.

Many women suffer not only physically but also psychologically from being threatened or intimidated with guns, as tools of domestic violence.

Comments from participants on their experiences with armed violence in relation to gender:

SOUTHEAST ASIA

Indonesia: "In the conflict and post-conflict area, it was easy to get guns for civilians. They are also provided by terrorists (ISIS or other groups). Women will have to carry multiple burdens after the death of their spouse due to conflict. They have to become caretaker and breadwinner of the family."

Myanmar: "We have a "manpower tradition" and a patriarchal society. According to our history and cultural norms, the man is the leader of the family. They hold tools like knives, swords, spears, and guns. No women are in the military or militant groups."

Thailand: "Fighting and conflicts is still ongoing in the South of Thailand, where a lot of weapons are used. When men use guns and become killers, they will be arrested and jailed. The woman will be alone and has to pay lawyers and will often be stigmatized as a widow or even a killer's wife."

Timor-Leste: "In 2006, guns were distributed to civilians by government members. Weapons are remnants of the conflict. One of the impacts is long-term stress. Another impact is that people might die, due to lacking gun control by police, men or women."

SOUTH ASIA:

Afghanistan: "Because so many people have access to guns, women do suffer from the forced marriage, sexual harassment due to the gun ownership. Groups that have guns often threaten people. Sometimes guns are even used to force the civilian to vote for a certain person or political party."

Pakistan: "We have a lot of illegal factories that manufacture illegal arms. It has been all over Pakistan because of the corruption. This allowed for small arms to be trafficked and transported throughout the whole country."

THE PACIFIC:

Papua New Guinea: "Guns are used, guns are present in our communities! The impact that violence and rape have on our children are massive."

Solomon Islands: "In terms of GBV: 64% of all women and girls have experienced GBV, if we have another study in 2020, I am sure it will go above that, because rates are increasing at the moment and we do not know how to stop it."

Major gendered causes and impacts of gun violence identified by the participants during this session:

Gendered causes for gun ownership:

- Strongly embedded patriarchal systems and social norms.
- Traditional gender norms and perceptions of gender constructions.
- Intention to protect themselves or the family.

Gendered impacts of gun violence:

- Increased sexual, psychological and domestic violence.
- Men are the majority of victims killed by firearms (84%).
- Increased burden and vulnerability for women when left alone due to death or imprisonment of the husband.

2.1.2 KEY INSIGHTS

This session highlighted clear commonalities between the different sub-regions. Gun ownership is linked to the existence of patriarchal systems, which exist in a supportive and interdependent relationship to historically embedded gender norms and constructs such as the man being the protector of and the provider for the family, while women are commonly perceived as mothers and housewives. Gender constructs have led to specific perceptions of masculinity and femininity. Perceptions of masculinity raise the expectation for men to be the protectors and warriors, while women are perceived to be weak, vulnerable and depending on the protection provided by men⁸.

Often these gender constructs and patriarchal systems are accompanied by social norms which allow men easier access to weapons, due to common practices observed in the Asia-Pacific region. For instance, social norms result in favouring men during the recruitment for positions in the military and police sector or a lack of interest, among women, to pursue positions in traditionally male-dominated sectors. All three sub-regional workshops indicated strong social and cultural norms, and conservative gender constructs has led to the gendered nature of gun ownership.

The workshops also revealed that gun ownership is often understood to be for “protection” purposes. However, the participants noted that while gun owners think guns provide them with more safety, expert research and statistical data prove the opposite is true⁹. Furthermore, the participants identified gender-based motives in regard to protection as a cause for gun ownership for men and women. They remarked that men often see weapons as status symbols and use it to exercise power and revenge, while women commonly use different types of SALW for self-defence and the defence of their children.

Discussions identified specific aspects of the gendered impacts of gun violence which apply in all three sub-regions. Participants recognized that increases of gender-based, sexual, psychological and domestic violence can be considered direct gendered impacts from the presence of illicit small arms. This includes, violent acts such as forced marriage, honour killings and other various types of abuse. All three sub-regions highlighted that significant power imbalances emerge alongside the existence of gun violence. This imbalance of power typically shifts women (and other people who don't possess guns) into weaker positions, where they are vulnerable to violence. Additionally, gun ownership promotes and reinforces patriarchal systems and conventional understandings of gender norms further reinforcing the impacts of SALW in a never-ending cycle.

Participants and experts discussed the gendered impact of SALW in conflict settings. It was noted there is an increase in female-headed households as 84% of all victims killed in firearm-related incidents are men¹⁰. Women are often left with the burden of taking on additional roles in terms of income generating activities and a senior role in the family, impacting other areas of gender imbalances which may also exacerbate gender tensions and place women in a more vulnerable position. In addition, if the man of the household dies, women may struggle with additional responsibilities such as paying for the funeral and they may also have to cope with the stigmatization of being a widow.

2.2 International SALW Agreements and Instruments

2.2.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important Notes to remember:

Legal SALW trade:

Is trade in accordance with national and international laws and must be authorized by the respective authorities of both: the importing and the exporting state.

Illegal SALW trade:

Is a transfer which violates international and/or national laws of the sending and/or receiving country.

Legal trade can be easily diverted into the illicit markets. Almost all illegal arms began as legal arms Illicit transfers contribute to crime, conflict and violence. Existing international SALW control instruments can help overcome challenges faced by states.

KEY DOCUMENTS

- the ATT
- the UN PoA
- UNSCR 1325
- UNSCR 2117
- UNSCR 2220
- UNSCR 2122
- UNSCR 2242
- UNGA res. 71/56
- UNGA res. 65/69
- UNGA res. 69/61

During this session, challenges in the prevention of the illicit weapon trade were identified by all participants and potential activities to be carried out by NGOs in order to establish greater SALW control and to support the implementation of international SALW agreements and instruments have been discussed among participants and experts.

Challenges:

- Identification of an entry point/person with influence and power
- Lack of knowledge and (perceived) culture of impunity among politicians
- Lack of political will
- Lack of information and awareness
- Lack of gender responsive budgets and funds
- A deeply embedded mentality regarding concepts of masculinity and gun ownership
- Physical threats from power holders

Potential Activities by NGOs:

- Find / liaise with champions within the government
- Advocate to incorporate the topic into school curricula
- Mobilize media to disseminate information about illicit trade
- Raise awareness and educate in order to mobilize a civil opinion
- Work together with the policy level of governments and coordinate with MPs, NGOs and likeminded people & endorse joint advocacy
- Form alliances with other NGOs
- Produce gender-sensitive evidence through research to be used in education and advocacy
- Advocacy to integrate the PoA / WPS in the National Development Plan / National Action Plan
- Include WPS Agenda in the Security Sector Reform (SSR)
- Provide well-researched information to legislators, as well as awareness training and recommendations for MPs and the government

2.2.2 KEY INSIGHTS

This session discussed the gender aspects of the UN PoA and the ATT. Meaningful participation and representation of women in PoA-related policy-making has been strongly encouraged and emphasized at the Biennial Meetings of States, the 2018 Third Review Conference on the implementation of the Programme of Action¹¹ and their respective outcome documents¹². Despite these positive developments, women are often discussed from the perspective of their vulnerability, as opposed to their importance as vital actors and agents of change for peace and disarmament.

Both in and outside of armed conflict, studies have proven there is a high correlation between femicide (killing of females) and use of firearms rates¹³. Research and surveys conducted have shown that, generally speaking, women more often tend to have a negative opinion about SALW than men. Women are also more prone to opt for stricter regulations.¹⁴ This is why it is critical to address prevailing gender systems as part of SALW control policies and why women must actively participate in all types of activities to counter gun-violence and efforts for SALW control.

Information about the international SALW control instruments information provided during the sub-regional workshops proved to be significantly relevant to participants as less than half of them were familiar with the UN PoA, the ATT or the Firearms Protocol prior to the workshops.

NGOs representatives were strongly interested in learning about practical measures they may engage with, in order to contribute to national efforts on preventing illicit small arms flows and armed violence. This session opened space for ideas and approaches on how to build consensus on between civil society and government on matters, such as awareness raising, the conduction of research and working with the government providing information. These ideas directly address some of the existing challenges identified such as the lack of information and political will. An example given was on the production of research with age- and sex-desegregated data as crucially important and constitutes an opportunity to generate a greater understanding of the gendered nature of SALW proliferation and impact, as well as on the importance of gender sensitive budget allocations to ensure women's full and meaningful participation in preventing illicit trade of SALW.

Experts identified activities to be carried out by NGOs

- Provide awareness, training and recommendations for MPs and the government;
- Lobby for the adoption of national laws, regulations and procedures;
- Help increase public awareness on the UN PoA and national laws;
- Perform a monitoring role;
- Engage in creating or strengthening National Commissions on SALW control through advocacy and participation;
- Help identify groups engaged in the illegal manufacture, trade and possession of illicit small arms;
- Advocate for manufacturers to apply reliable marking on weapons;
- Encourage government to destroy confiscated and seized weapons;
- Encourage voluntary surrender of illegal weapons by civilians;
- Observe DDR programs in conflict and post-conflict situations;
- Encourage States to promote safe stockpile management complying with international standards; and
- Conduct research aimed at facilitating greater awareness and better understanding of the nature and scope of the problems associated with the illicit trade in small arms.

2.3 Mainstreaming Gender in Small Arms Control

2.3.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important Notes to remember:

Over the past 40 years Only 32% of participants in all Disarmament-related meetings globally were women.

On average only 20% of participants in smaller disarmament and arms control forums e.g. Governmental Experts are women.

Between 1990 and 2017 only 8% of all peace negotiators worldwide were women.

The Representation of women in the General Assembly Third Committee - dealing with human rights, humanitarian affairs and social matters - is on average 20% higher than in the First Committee - dealing with disarmament and international security matters.

During the workshops, participants were asked to complete two sentences. The compilation of postulated suggestions is provided in the boxes below.

“To reduce gun violence and the illicit arms flows, women can _____”

- ❖ ... [need] to be involved in decision-making processes.
- ❖ ... initiate petitions to the President and the Government demanding more actions on gun control e.g. ratification of the ATT.
- ❖ ... create a focal point for Women, Peace and Security (WPS FP).
- ❖ ... work with men strategically to bring them onside to advocate for WPS, and to identify strategies for prioritized action for gun control activities.
- ❖ ... be part of the development process and act as peacebuilders.
- ❖ ... work to integrate SALW in WPS National Action Plans (NAPs) and monitor their implementation
- ❖ ... represent other women and girls in the discussion on gun control.
- ❖ ... inspire alternative solutions to gun violence from a survivor perspective.
- ❖ ... empower yourselves and others by gathering and sharing knowledge.
- ❖ ... cooperate with relevant authorities to report on SALW civilian possession.
- ❖ ... encourage members of their family/community/clan to engage with the competent authorities to render guns for destruction.
- ❖ ... convince family/community/clan to register their weapons.
- ❖ ... play a leadership role in strategic areas within your own communities.
- ❖ ... stops shops in your communities from selling toy-guns and ask others not to give their children or grandchildren toy-guns.

“To close the gap between policy and practice _____”

- ❖ ... education and awareness are the most important elements.
- ❖ ... women should be included in all decision-making committees at all levels.
- ❖ ... we need to ensure women’s effective and meaningful participation.
- ❖ ... there should be frequent discussions / dialogue between all stakeholders.
- ❖ ... it is important to cooperate between government and civil society.
- ❖ ... there needs to be an effective follow-up system to monitor the fulfillment of existing commitments made by states.
- ❖ ... a coordinated approach to monitoring the implementation of policies/laws on SALW by countries and by region would be helpful.
- ❖ ... intervention is needed to pay attention to local power relations.
- ❖ ... negotiations between leaders are needed to create laws for monitoring gun trades.
- ❖ ... is it important for civil society to be a part of gun control oversight functions.
- ❖ ... we need NAPs which include recommendations based on local realities.
- ❖ ... citizens can hold the government accountable to existing laws or petition their parliaments to make the laws stronger.

2.3.2 KEY INSIGHTS

To ensure the full and effective implementation of the PoA, ATT, and other measures for SALW control, it is imperative to bridge the gender gap which still characterizes small arms related decision-making processes. Notably, there are gaps between policy and practice with regards to the implementation and effectiveness of international instruments and agreements.¹⁸ Also it is evident men are still overwhelmingly in charge of decision- and policy making on arms control, implementation of respective agreements and constitute the majority of personnel in security and defence forces.

A change of paradigm in how to address arms control issues can be encouraged when both society and national authorities advocate for an increased participation of women in this field. Participants noted a significant step to achieve this goal would be to create a shared understanding among all stakeholders on the important role gender plays in SALW control. According to the experts and participants building consensus among stakeholders would provide the grounds for the implementation of gender-sensitive approaches to arms control and would lead to the progressive meaningful participation of women.

Innovative ideas on what women can do to reduce gun violence and illicit arms flows were presented by the participants and discussed. Main ideas include: the monitoring of National Action Plans (NAPs) on SALW; the integration of SALW control in WPS NAPs; and the designation of a national focal point for WPS, who could inter alia assist ensuring gender mainstreaming in the development of NAPs.

This workshop session led to the identification of a variety of activities, which can be adopted in order to strengthen women's participation in arms control processes. The discussed ideas were grouped into the following areas:

- i) advocating for gender-responsive small arms control policies;
- ii) awareness-raising; and education;
- iii) addressing underlying drivers;
- iv) challenging gender norms and masculinity;
- v) integration of gender in post-conflict processes;
- vi) collection of data;
- vii) ensuring the implementation of existing commitments; and
- viii) increasing networks and communication.

These engagements can be carried out independently by NGOs and could be further integrated into the joint initiatives of MPs and NGOs.

Experts identified activities which help to include

Gender Dimension in Arms Control Processes:

- Women should be involved as sources of information, as well as observers of different situations in their countries.
- DDR programs need to recognize women who were part of the conflict, e.g. ex-combatants or survivors.
- Focusing on and advocating for gender mainstreaming.
- Document and share women's experiences, particularly good practices and success stories.
- Collect and use sex-and age-disaggregated data to support small arms control interventions.
- Lobby government to appoint women in decision-making roles in National Commissions on Small Arms Control and other arms control mechanisms.
- Conduct peace, gender and disarmament education and other programs which promote tolerance and non-violence.

2.4 Campaigns and Strategies

2.4.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important Notes to remember:

Advocacy:

Refers to the organization of information into argument form, so it can be used to persuade an audience towards some attitude or predisposition. It further seeks to bring change in the given context.

Advocacy covers:

- Research
- Campaigning, awareness-raising and mobilizing other stakeholders
- Lobbying decision and/or policy making.

Lobbying:

The conduct of activities aimed at influencing public officials especially the legislature.

Campaign:

An organized course of action or a series of strategic activities planned and implemented to effect change.

Workshops identified common difficulties NGOs may face when implementing activities to combat illicit SALW and the gendered impacts of armed violence. The chart below summarizes possible solutions proposed by the participants to overcome commonly faced barriers.

Common difficulties/barriers & how to overcome them:

Lack of Women's participation in decision making roles

- Involve males in key roles to built strong networks and alliances
- Empower younger generations to become female leaders
- Build professional capacities among women to take on positions

Access to information

- Generate information independently by conducting research
- Request assistance from MPs to access sensitive information
- Make careful use of available data and resources

Data collection

- Find alliances to support your team
- Ask local community members and key figures for support
- Create a realistic time frame for data collection

Reporting/Advocate for Reporting

- Find champions in the government to give your recommendation a voice
- Create petitions demanding the government to report on e.g. ATT or PoA
- Initiate peaceful demonstrations to ensure your state reports to the ATT or PoA as required

Reaching a wide audience with advocacy campaigns

- Make use of social media and other local means of communication
- Request local leaders and/or important figures to support your campaigns
- Define your audience and select appropriate means to get their attention

Lack of interest

- Highlight the importance of your topic
- Find interesting and creative ways to bring attention to your topic
- Help people understand how this topic affects their personal lives

2.4.2 KEY INSIGHTS

While planning campaigns and strategies for lobbying and advocacy different factors are to be considered in order to ensure the effectiveness of the endeavour, for example, activities will depend on the context and on the environments in which they will be employed. For instance, an online campaign may lead to great success in areas with large access to internet while in areas with limited internet coverage, a radio campaign could be a better choice. Participants identified a variety of tools that can be used for media campaigns, such as social media, radio, TV, newspaper, billboards and flyers. The elaboration of implemented project ideas and activities under the chapter “Potential Joint NGO-MP Initiatives” and “Implemented NGO activities” provide practical examples to be used for guidance and inspiration.

Session discussions resulted in the identification of important steps to follow while developing and planning advocacy or lobbying efforts. These steps provide sequential practical guidance in order to ensure the effectiveness of emphasized activities.

NGOs can be involved in a variety of activities to support the overall goal to combat illicit SALW trafficking and to reduce the gendered impacts of armed violence. For instance, an NGO can play a pivotal role in lobbying for the adoption of national laws, regulations and procedures to strengthen national prevention measures for the illicit trade of SALW and ensure the fulfilment of respective international commitments. Another objective could be lobbying governments in order to initiate campaigns on destruction of confiscated or seized weapons and ammunition to ensure they cannot return into illicit trafficking networks. NGOs could advocate for reliable marking practices for weapons that are assigned to national military of security forces. Furthermore, efforts of NGOs to collect or generate relevant data could be used to inform MPs of current realities and to help build awareness raising campaigns on the UN PoA, the ATT, for national laws and on other relevant topics. NGOs could gather data not only to support their projects, but also to inform communities and to ensure there is an informed interaction between the National Commission on SALW and societies in general.

Experts advised 10 Important Steps for Advocacy

1. Identify the problem
2. Gather, research and analyze the necessary information
3. Develop advocacy goals and objectives (both short and long term)
4. Identify advocacy targets (primary targets – those who have decision-making authority, secondary targets – those who can influence decision-makers, tertiary targets – those who can support your advocacy efforts)
5. Develop a advocacy message
6. Plan for methods and means – Identify the best medium to convey the messaging and to reach the target audience
7. Alliance building with supporters of your cause
8. Developing a work plan
9. Implementation
10. Monitoring and Evaluation

2.5 Potential Joint NGO-MP Initiatives

2.5.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important Notes to remember:

The collection and provision of data by NGOs is highly required and of vital importance. Data can be used to inform MPs and NGOs. The collection of gender disaggregated data is crucially important.

Joint initiatives should be very concrete and focused. It is important to define realistic time frames and goals.

Joint efforts between MPs and NGOs have an increased potential to generate effective and successful measures to combat illicit trafficking of SALW and the gendered impacts of armed violence.

Joint initiatives have the power to channel resources to significantly reduce human suffering and human loss due to illicit SALW.

Input from joint NGO-MP Break-out Groups:

During this session, NGO representatives and MPs were divided in groups to develop ideas for joint initiatives, which they shared and discussed with all other sub-regional stakeholders:

Highlights!

All three sub-regions expressed their intention to implement campaigns to raise awareness on the security risks posed by the illicit circulation of SALW and to promote SALW control utilizing social media, radio, tv, newspaper, billboards events and other tools.

2.5.2 KEY INSIGHTS

Every year more than 500,000 people worldwide die of armed violence conducted with SALW, of which around one quarter die in conflict settings and three-quarter die in non-conflict settings, while many more are injured every year.¹⁹ Approaches to regulate arms need to be brought in line with the magnitude of the phenomena. Joint initiatives between MPs and NGOs will lead to a more comprehensive approach to reduce human suffering and human loss.

Each workshop dedicated one session to developing ideas for joint initiatives between MPs and NGOs which offered the opportunity to combine newly gained insights with their professional expertise. It was unanimously emphasized that joint initiatives between MPs and NGOs are crucial. Participants stressed the identification of problems and solutions, the design of specific activities in local communities and leadership in the implementation of these activities should emanate from local communities themselves. Implementing and planning should be a flexible combination of top-down and bottom-up approaches.²⁰ The participants also discussed the specific roles and responsibilities of MPs and NGOs while designing and implementing small arms control activities. The main role for the parliamentarians lies in three key functions, namely: legislative, over-sight, and awareness-raising. Furthermore, MPs can advocate for resource mobilization and allocation. The main role for NGOs lies in: i) providing national, regional and international expertise, ii) providing critical and constructive opinion, and iii) conducting research and field-based analysis.

In addition, MPs and NGOs have a complementary role in drafting bills, promoting dialogue initiatives, and in shadowing reports and budgets.²¹ Due to their complementary role, joint initiatives constitute an effective way toward the realization of the common objective to combat and prevent the illicit SALW trade and promote SALW control. Joint initiatives diminish communication gaps between national governments and society and increase the likelihood of successful implementation of activities.

2.6 Implemented NGO Initiatives

2.6.1 HIGHLIGHTS

Important Notes to remember:

Initiatives can be undertaken in various forms, depending on the given environment and situation. Approaches should be contextualized, and the most effective tools should be chosen.

Building a network of different actors / stakeholders can be highly effective. Different actors can complement each other in their roles and engage in joint activities.

It is an important responsibility of NGOs to conduct research and to raise awareness and create capacities amongst civilians. This allows for well-informed discussions between the NGOs and the Government.

Since the completion of the sub-regional workshops participating NGOs have carried out the following activities based on their increased capacity:

Letters:

to MPs have been sent, highlighting the impacts of gun violence

Creative Activities:

27 Interactive street theatres and folk song shows have been conducted incl. follow-up survey

Project:

guided by the WPS Agenda "Empowered Women, Peaceful Communities" has been implemented

Workshops:

e.g. on the topic "Peace, Disarmament and Gender Equality" have been implemented

Network Building and Collaboration:

between key actors who work in related areas

Poem Competition:

with the theme "Rise up for Humanity: Control the guns" has been undertaken

Advocacy:

efforts e.g. focusing on Gender Mainstreaming in SSR; and for the achievement of the SDGs through nonviolence have been carried out

Organization of Meetings:

for local women leaders to increase communication, exchange and to provide knowledge have been conducted

Awareness Raising:

e.g. Peace and Disarmament Education initiatives.

2.6.2 KEY INSIGHTS

Non-governmental Organizations which participated in the three sub-regional workshops on “Gun Violence and Illicit Small Arms Trafficking from a Gender Perspective” implemented a variety of activities, the complete list can be found in Annex 3. These activities were developed making use of examples given during the workshop or ongoing activities were enhanced by their increased capacity and inspiration gained from the workshops. For instance, some NGOs were involved in writing letters to MPs to highlight the impacts of gun violence and the importance of the adoption and implementation of international SALW control agreements and instruments as part of their advocacy efforts. The organization “Women for Peace and Democracy from Nepal” organized a poem competition on the theme “Rise up for Humanity: Control the guns” in collaboration with IANSA. The competition contributed to the creation of awareness on illicit use of SALW and its impact on people, society and the nation.

A variety of workshops have been conducted. The INSAN Foundation Trust (IFT) from Pakistan conducted workshops focused on the role of university students in raising awareness and providing knowledge on SALW control, as well as on peace and democracy topics. The Prajnaya Trust, an NGO from India, conducted a workshop on “Peace, Disarmament and Gender Equality”²², focused on small arms and gender, as well as broader security issues. This event was attended not only by women organizations but also men who were particularly trained on specific security topics.

Additionally, some NGOs organized meetings for women leaders with the objective to promote dialogue on the topic of gun control from a gender perspective. For instance, Aurat Publication and Information Service Foundation, an NGO from Pakistan, organized meetings with women leaders that resulted in the development of action plans to sensitize communities on gun violence and illicit small arms trafficking from a gender perspective.

The Association of War Affected Women from Sri Lanka implemented an island wide advocacy campaign on “Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals through Non-Violence” where they used different types of outreach tools, like books for school children, short documentaries and printed caps and T-Shirts, resulting the in increased awareness about non-violence within the communities. IFT is also implementing a project in cooperation with UNDP called “Young Women Leadership for Peace & Security” which trains 50 young women through a six-month mentorship program to contribute to increased capacities among women to take on qualified roles in the security sector. Within this programme, the young women will implement security related initiatives they developed themselves in and for their respective districts. Complementing its other activities, the organization also conducted research on “Militant Political Parties and Negotiating Political Space,” the results were disseminated in a national forum. In cooperation with UN Women, the Bangladesh Nari Protagi Sangha organization conducted a project on the Women, Peace and Security Agenda entitled “Empowered Women, Peaceful Community” which resulted in the formation of a platform of 21 women organizations from 21 different districts in Bangladesh, who are contributing to the development of the NAP on WPS by the government of Bangladesh.

3. Conclusions

Despite the variety of participant experiences with armed conflicts and gun violence in each country, each of the three sub-regional workshops revealed several commonalities. All sub-regional representatives reflected there were very similar gender norms and practices leading to imbalances of power and a differing impact of armed violence on women and men. It was acknowledged that men account for most victims injured by firearms while they also comprise the majority of perpetrators of firearm-related incidents. On the other hand, it was acknowledged women own only a minor share of firearms but are disproportionately victimized by their misuse. The unique and asymmetrical ways women are affected by SALW violence is an issue that requires greater visibility and cannot be adequately addressed in SALW control policy without the collection of gender- and sex-disaggregated data and the inclusion of women in the decision-making process.

Discussions helped participants gain a clearer understanding of the importance of gender mainstreaming in combating illicit small arms, as well as the gendered impacts of armed violence. The participants appreciated their newly gained knowledge and shared understanding of principles, norms and commitments stemming from the international agreements to control SALW, prevent gun violence and empower women to actively participate in decision-making processes. Building consensus among all stakeholders is the first step to pave the way for gender-sensitive approaches to ensure gender mainstreaming in the security sector and to contribute to greater SALW control.

The sub-regional workshops and the concluding seminar provided the opportunity for MPs and NGOs to engage in developing ideas for individual and joint endeavours in the future. These ideas comprised a variety of different approaches to addressing the problem of illicit SALW from a gender perspective, including advocacy for gender-responsive small arms control policies, addressing primary factors and challenges, as well as the integration of the gender perspective in post-conflict processes. It was determined all approaches to address the problem of illicit SALW must be based on: a) the collection and analysis of gender-related information; b) sharing the results with national governments, civil society groups and parliaments, and c) joint efforts to determine practical measures.

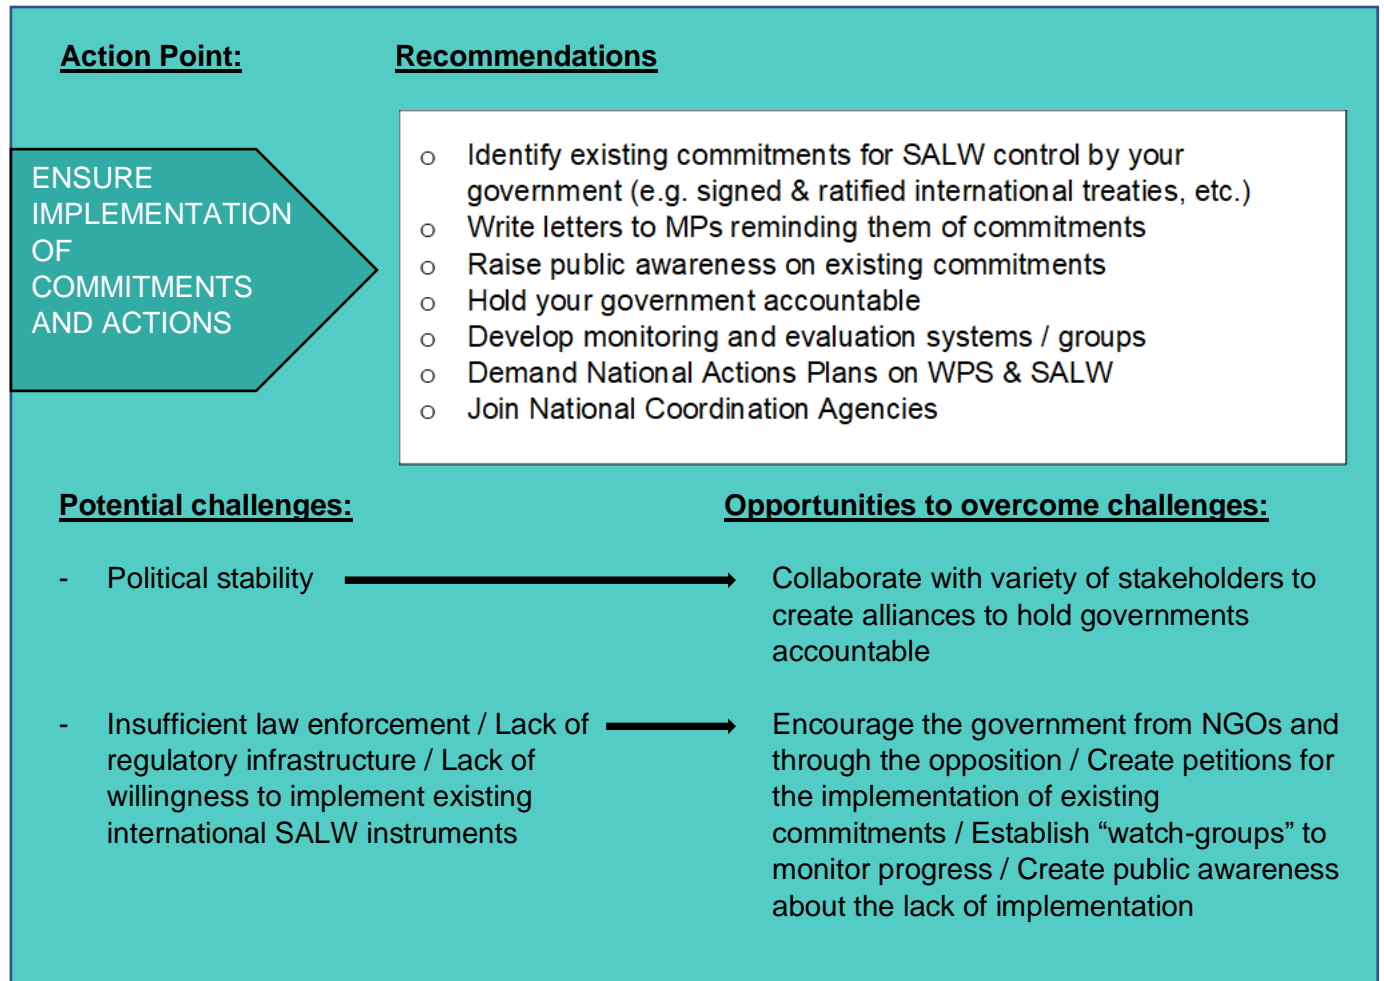

The participants of the project's events emphasized the necessity of improving communication and building networks on national and potentially sub-regional or regional levels. Considering the transnational character of illegal flows of arms in different sub-regions, coordinated regional efforts that would involve parliaments, governments and NGOs would complement national measures.

It was agreed by all participants, collective efforts between the legislative branch of government, represented by MPs, and civil society, represented by NGOs, are mutually complementary and reinforcing. These efforts are critical to mitigate and eradicate the negative impact of illicit trafficking and misuse of small arms. Cooperation between civil society and legislators would lead to producing initiatives aimed at addressing related challenges with adequate legislative support and mechanism for their implementation and parliamentary oversight.

4. Action Points and Recommendations

The ideas for joint NGO-MP initiatives were analysed during the projects concluding seminar to identify the most relevant ideas and most promising opportunities for all three sub-regions. Participants from all three sub-regions discussed the Actions Points and Recommendations and identified possible challenges of implementation as well as solutions and to overcome potential challenges.

Action Point:

RAISE
& ADVOCATE

Recommendations:

- Create awareness in the society about the gendered impacts and dimensions of SALW through effective and continuous engagement of community members, NGOs and political parties at the local and parliamentary levels.
- Organize education and information sharing on SALW at the grassroots level to achieve societal and political change.
- Develop mechanisms to raise awareness and educate on a national and local level
- Develop public awareness initiatives with a message and logo
- Develop concrete messaging with logo
- (e.g. via social media, poster or radio campaigns)

Potential challenges:

Opportunities to overcome challenges:

- | | | |
|---|--------|--|
| ❖ Lack of political will | —————> | Request MPs to present topics and data in parliamentary government meetings |
| ❖ Lack of access to information | —————> | Arrange round-table discussions; regular meetings / workshops; utilize information available online |
| ❖ The availability of data / documents / information in local languages | —————> | Create translations to make knowledge accessible for a larger audience |
| ❖ Lack of expertise (within the organization) | —————> | Participate in free online courses; request workshops and trainings; Training of Trainers (ToT); use multiplier effect |
| ❖ Reaching a wide audience | —————> | Use social media; conduct creative activities and events; use existing communication and campaign tools; use free online advocacy tools; create safe spaces to talk; build coalitions and networks |
| ❖ Geographical circumstances (lack of infrastructure in rural areas) | —————> | Use radio channels and other local means of communication |

Action Point:

GATHER DATA
& GENERATE KNOWLEDGE /
RESOURCES

Recommendations

- Conduct country-specific surveys
(to develop statistics on gun violence and illicit weapons)
- Analyze existing data
- Collect data from stakeholder discussions
- Review and analyze existing legislation to identify potential gaps and close them
- Develop a local and/or regional data bank for SALW
- Map the location of legal and illegal SALW
- Create capacity and resources by educating yourself and others
(e.g. online information, online trainings, workshops you can participate in, contact experts, conduct research etc.)

Potential challenges:

Opportunities to overcome challenges:

- | | | |
|---|--------|---|
| ❖ Access to information | —————→ | Request help from the parliament to retrieve information; make use of national legislation which supports a citizens' right to information; create petitions for data |
| ❖ Trust building issue with research respondents | —————→ | Engage researchers who are close to the target group; request assistance from community leaders and other local trust figures; build relationships |
| ❖ To collect gender and age disaggregated data on a countrywide scale | —————→ | Advocate for the government to collect country relevant data |
| ❖ Lack of human resources | —————→ | Generate free (online) volunteers; join efforts between multiple NGOs; create fundraising campaigns to hire staff for research |

Action Point:

ENHANCE COMMUNICATION
& NETWORKING

Recommendations

- Create space for dialogue between MPs and NGOs
- Create a forum for all stakeholders to discuss the impact of guns and SALW violence on families, especially women.
- Form roundtable discussions
(e.g. with MPs and international Experts)
- Involve civil society in discussions
(e.g. in open events/forums or through social media)
- Form platforms for people to work on gun control
(e.g. create a working committee, NGO alliances, network of supporters and regular meetings with stakeholders)

Potential challenges:

Opportunities to overcome challenges:

- | | | |
|--|--------|--|
| ❖ Limited network of people with knowledge on related topics | —————→ | Educate interested people, conduct regular meetings with educational opportunities |
| ❖ Reaching out to the grassroots level | —————→ | Conduct regular local level community meetings / create a grassroots level network and find local ways of communication (letters/emails/major etc.) to keep members informed |
| ❖ Communicating with and raising issues to the attention of the Government | —————→ | Request support and advise from MPs |
| ❖ Lack of infrastructure | —————→ | Discover possibilities of online networks and regular online meetings |

Annex 1: Key documents and Information

1.1 UN Programme of Action on SALW and its International Tracing Instrument

The UN Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects (PoA), to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons, is a globally agreed framework, adopted by all UN Member States in 2001, under which governments agreed to improve national small arms laws, import/export controls, and stockpile management and to engage in cooperation and assistance.²³ In 2005, they also adopted the International Tracing Instrument (ITI)²⁴, which requires States to ensure weapons are properly marked and records are kept. Moreover, it provides a framework for cooperation in weapons tracing fulfilling one of the commitments governments made in the Programme of Action. Improving weapons tracing is now part of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. The UN PoA on SALW envisages the convening of Biennial Meetings of States “to consider the national, regional and global implementation of the Programme of Action.”²⁵

Since the PoA was adopted in 2001, the UN has worked to support the implementation of the PoA at national, regional, and international levels. It has hosted three Review Conferences²⁶, six Biennial Meetings of States (the 7th Biennial Meeting of States is planned for 2020²⁷) and two meetings of Government Experts.

It is important to note that in the PoA preamble, States express grave concern over the devastating consequences of the illicit trade in small arms for, inter alia, women. In the outcome document of the Third Review Conference of States on the PoA (A/CONF.192/2018/RC/3) held in June 2018, States agreed to promote the full participation and representation of women in mechanisms relating to the implementation of the PoA; take account of the differing impacts of the illicit trade in SALW on women, men, girls and boys in policy and programme designs; ensure coordination between national authorities responsible for the implementation of the PoA and the WPS agenda; and encourage the collection of data disaggregated by gender.²⁸

Reporting to the PoA is an integral part of its implementation. National reports to the PoA are essential practical tools aimed to assess progress in achieving the Programme’s goals. The information gathered from the reports reinforces the need for coordinated action among the various government agencies tackling these problems. Guidance for Member States in order to prepare national reports can be found on the UN PoA website, National Reporting.²⁹

1.2 Arms Trade Treaty

The Arms Trade Treaty (ATT) was adopted in 2013 by the General Assembly. Before its adoption, there was no global set of rules governing the trade in conventional weapons. Since the ATT was adopted and entered into force in 2014, the UN has hosted four conferences of State Parties. Through the ATT, States have agreed on robust international standards to help guide governments in deciding whether to authorize arms transfers. It provides cooperation and assistance to help countries develop adequate regulatory systems, and safe weapons stockpiles. The ATT covers all conventional weapons: from small arms to battle tanks, combat aircraft and warships. It includes ammunition and their parts & components.³⁰ With the establishment of common standards, the ATT seeks to reduce the illicit arms trade and human suffering caused by illegal and irresponsible arms transfers. It further seeks to improve regional security and stability as well as to promote accountability and transparency by state parties concerning transfers of conventional arms.

The Arms Trade Treaty matters to a broad cross-section of countries. The successful conclusion of the negotiating process on 2 April 2013 was just the first step. The humanitarian and security potential of this Treaty will only be realized when countries at all points in the supply-chain, both major arms producing States and developing countries alike, join and implement the Treaty. The Treaty's impact will be measured by how it is implemented on the ground. The political will of States to ensure the Treaty's robust implementation will need to be maintained.³¹

The ATT includes a legally binding provision related to gender-based violence (GBV) (article 7(4)). The risk of GBV thus forms an essential criterion in the export assessment that must precede the authorization of any export by States Parties of conventional weapons, ammunition and munitions, and parts and components within the scope of the ATT.³²

A step-by-step guidance for government officials how to accede to the ATT, can be found here.³³

The Arms Trade Treaty Reporting Template is a practical template to be used by State Parties when preparing their annual report in accordance with the Treaty's Article 13(3), and can be found here.³⁴

1.3 Securing our Common Future – An Agenda for Disarmament

What the Disarmament Agenda is about

The Disarmament Agenda is divided into four pillars:

- 1) Disarmament to save humanity;
- 2) Disarmament that saves lives;
- 3) Disarmament for future generations;
- 4) Strengthening partnerships for disarmament³⁵

Brief introduction of the 4 pillars: ³⁶

I. “Disarmament to save humanity”

All States must work together to achieve concrete and irreversible steps to prepare for a world free of nuclear weapons. With respect to other weapons of mass destruction, the Security Council must act to ensure the respect for norms against chemical weapons. We must continue to strengthen our institutions to prevent any use of biological weapons. We must also prevent the emergence of new and destabilizing strategic weapons, including in outer space, for the sake of international stability.

II. “Disarmament that saves lives”

International approaches to regulate arms need to be brought in line with the magnitude of these problems and integrated into broader work for prevention and sustainable development. This includes action at the country level to end the illicit trade in small arms and their ammunition. It also includes building a deeper institutional understanding on the impact of arms on conflict management, ensuring the security and physical protection of excessive and poorly maintained stockpiles and fostering regional dialogue to reduce military spending to build confidence.

III. “Disarmament for future generations”

We need to remain vigilant regarding new and emerging weapon technologies. New measures are necessary to ensure that humans always maintain control over the use of force. We must foster a culture of accountability and adherence to norms, rules and principles for responsible behaviour in cyberspace. Raising awareness and convening dialogue on the implications of emerging weapon technologies, encouraging responsible innovation. We must take steps to encourage responsible innovation by industry, engineers and scientists.

IV. “Strengthening partnerships for disarmament”

Greater efforts are needed to achieve equal, full and effective participation of women in all decision-making processes related to disarmament. More education and training opportunities should be established, in order to empower young people to be a force for change and disarmament. Finally, there must be better engagement and integration of experts, industry and civil society representatives into United Nations efforts for disarmament.

1.4 Security Council Resolutions

Women, Peace and Security (WPS) Security Council Resolutions

There is wide recognition that the equal, full and effective participation of both men and women is vital to the maintenance of international peace and security. Since the adoption of Security Council resolution (SCR) 1325 (2000) and the women, peace and security (WPS) agenda, the world has witnessed an outpouring of efforts to engage women as agents of change in disarmament and arms control processes. This positive trend has been advanced by involving women directly affected by armed violence as well as initiating women-led policy initiatives.

In response to persistent pressure from civil society, the United Nations (UN) Security Council has adopted nine resolutions on “Women, Peace and Security”. These resolutions are: 1325 (2000); 1820 (2009); 1888 (2009); 1889 (2010); 1960 (2011); 2106 (2013); 2122 (2013); 2242 (2015), and 2467 (2019). These nine resolutions make up the Women, Peace and Security Agenda. They guide work to promote gender equality and strengthen women’s participation, protection and rights across the conflict cycle, from conflict prevention through post-conflict reconstruction.

UNSCR 1325 is much more than a number or a resolution it is a historic watershed political framework that shows how women, and a gender perspective, are relevant to negotiating peace agreements, planning refugee camps and peacekeeping operations as well as reconstructing war-torn societies for sustainable peace.

Resolution	Year	Info
S/RES/1325	2000	Often identified as the cornerstone of the Women, Peace and Security agenda at the United Nations. First time the Security Council addressed the disproportionate and unique impact of armed conflict on women; Recognizes the under-valued and under-utilized contributions women make to conflict prevention, peacekeeping, conflict resolution and peacebuilding; Stresses the importance of women's equal and full participation as active agents in peace and security Endorses the role of women in international peace and security, especially in decision-making and peace processes
S/RES/1327	2000	This resolution emphasized the importance of the Secretary-General in conflict prevention and reaffirmed the role of women in conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding. The Council also agreed to strengthen the system of consultations with TCCs through the holding of private meetings with them and stated a possibility to consider using the Military Staff Committee as one of the means of enhancing UN peacekeeping capacity.
S/RES/1366	2001	This resolution addressed the issue of DDR in UN peacekeeping and peacebuilding mandates and stated that preventing armed conflict was a major part of the Council's work.

S/RES/1408	2002	The Council encouraged civil society initiatives in the region, including those of the Mano River Union Women's Peace Network, to continue their contribution towards regional peace.
S/RES/1820	2008	Recognizes sexual violence as a weapon and tactic of war; and recognizes that widespread and systematic sexual violence is a threat to international security Notes that rape and other forms of sexual violence can constitute a war crime, crime against humanity, or a constitutive act with respect to genocide; Calls for training of troops on preventing and responding to sexual violence; Calls for more deployment of women in peace operations. Addressed sexual violence as a tactic of conflict, prohibited amnesty for sexual violence and called on the UN to develop peacekeeping tactics and mediation methods to address sexual violence
S/RES/1888	2009	Reiterates that sexual violence exacerbates armed conflict and impedes international peace and security; Calls for leadership to address conflict-related sexual violence; Calls for deployment of Team of Experts where cases of sexual violence occur. *Resolutions 1888 (2009), 1960 (2010) and 2106 (2013): assigned leadership, built judicial response and reporting mechanisms, provided accountability architecture, linked sexual violence in conflict agenda and inclusive mediation commitments.
S/RES/1889	2009	Focuses on post-conflict peacebuilding and on women's participation in all stages of peace processes; Calls for the development of indicators to measure the implementation of UNSCR1325 (2000).
S/RES/1960	2010	Reiterates the call for an end to sexual violence in armed conflict; Sets up "naming and shaming" listing mechanism, sending a direct political message that there are consequences for sexual violence including: listing in Secretary-General's annual reports, referrals to UN Sanctions Committees and to the ICC, international condemnation, and reparations. *Resolutions 1888 (2009), 1960 (2010) and 2106 (2013): assigned leadership, built judicial response and reporting mechanisms, provided accountability architecture, linked sexual violence in conflict agenda and inclusive mediation commitments.
S/RES/2106	2013	Explicitly affirms an "integrated approach" to sustainable peace; Sets out concrete methods for combating women's participation deficit;

		Recognizes the need to address root causes of armed conflict and security risks faced by women; Calls for the provision of multisectoral services to women affected by conflict; Links disarmament and gender equality by mentioning ATT twice. Focuses on operationalizing current obligations rather than on creating new structures/initiatives; Includes language on women’s participation in combating sexual violence; Supports recourse to avenues of justice. *Resolutions 1888 (2009), 1960 (2010) and 2106 (2013): assigned leadership, built judicial response and reporting mechanisms, provided accountability architecture, linked sexual violence in conflict agenda and inclusive mediation commitments.
S/RES/2122	2013	First comprehensive resolution since 1325, emphasized improved quality and regularity of WPS reporting to the Council by the SG and SRSGs Explicitly affirms an “integrated approach” to sustainable peace; Sets out concrete methods for combating women's participation deficit; Recognizes the need to address root causes of armed conflict and security risks faced by women; Calls for the provision of multisectoral services to women affected by conflict; Links disarmament and gender equality by mentioning ATT twice.
S/RES/2220	2015	Stresses the importance of women’s full and effective participation in all efforts related to countering the illicit transfer, destabilizing accumulation and misuse of small arms and light weapons, in line with resolution 1325 (2000).
S/RES/2242	2015	Explicitly affirms an “integrated approach” to sustainable peace; Encourages the empowerment of women to participate in the design and implementation of efforts to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit transfer, destabilizing accumulation and misuse of small arms and light weapons. Encourages assessment of strategies and resources in regards to the implementation of the WPS Agenda; Highlights the importance of collaboration with civil society; Calls for increased funding for gender-responsive training, analysis and programs; Urges gender as a cross-cutting issue within the CVE/CT Agendas; Recognizes the importance of integrating WPS across all country situations.

		Incorporated some recommendations of the Global Study on 1325 implementation and linked women's involvement in efforts to prevent and resolve conflict to the sustainability and effectiveness of those efforts.
S/RES/2272	2016	Addressed sexual exploitation and abuse in peacekeeping operations.
S/RES/2331	2016	First-ever resolution on human trafficking, which condemned the phenomenon and stressed how human trafficking can exacerbate conflict and foster insecurity.
S/RES/2467	2019	UNSCR 2467 (2019) recognizes that sexual violence in conflict occurs on a continuum of violence against women and girls; Recognizes national ownership and responsibility in addressing root causes of sexual violence, and names structural gender inequality and discrimination as a root cause; Recognizes the need for a survivor-centered approach; it further encourages Member States to ensure that prevention and response are non-discriminatory and specific, and respect the rights and prioritize the needs of survivors, including vulnerable or targeted groups; Affirms that services should include provisions for women with children born as a result of sexual violence in conflict as well as men and boys, and urges Member States to strengthen policies that offer appropriate responses and challenge cultural assumptions about male invulnerability; Urges Member States to strengthen access to justice for victims including via reparations and strengthened criminal law, including removing procedural impediments to justice.

1.6 Modular Small-arms-control Implementation Compendium³⁷

MOSAIC is a set of voluntary, practical guidance notes that each combine the best small-arms expertise in succinct, operational advice. MOSAIC is the result of a decade of coordinated work within the UN system. MOSAIC modules are used in well over half of Member States, assisting authorities around the world to improve their small-arms control measures.

What is MOSAIC?³⁸

MOSAIC translates into practice the objectives of key global agreements aiming to prevent the illicit trade, destabilizing accumulation and misuse of small arms and light weapons, including:

- the Programme of Action on the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons
- the International Tracing Instrument
- the Firearms Protocol supplementing the UN Convention against Transnational Organized Crime
- the Arms Trade Treaty.

MOSAIC modules are based on good practices, codes of conduct and standard operating procedures that have been developed at (sub-)regional levels. They are based on the very best technical advice from experts around the world. The MOSAIC compendium includes modules ranging from how to establish a national small-arms commission or set up a national SALW action plan, to modules on stockpile management, gender, or weapons marking. MOSAIC also supports the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals, including Goal 16 to promote peaceful, just and inclusive societies and its indicator 16.4 that includes a significant reduction in illicit arms flows. MOSAIC is a completely voluntary toolkit.

MOSAIC “...contributes directly to the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals.”
António Guterres
United Nations Secretary-General

Who developed MOSAIC?

Governments often call upon the UN system to provide advice and support on issues related to small arms and light weapons control — including on legislative, programmatic and operational matters. UN agencies decided the best way to ensure that the United Nations as a whole could consistently deliver high-quality advice and support in response to such requests was to develop international guidance on small arms and light weapons control similar to the standards the UN developed in the areas of mine action (International Mine Action Standards – IMAS); disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (Integrated DDR Standards – IDDRS); and ammunition (International Ammunition Technical Guidelines – IATG).

The MOSAIC Compendium is the result of a decade of coordinated work within the UN system, involving 24 partner entities with expertise ranging from development and weapons management to gender and public health. An external expert reference group of over 300 specialists, from NGOs to industry, completed the sturdy process of establishing each module.

Who can use MOSAIC?

MOSAIC can be used by any government or organization. Properly basing small-arms control endeavours on MOSAIC modules, reduces the risk of weapons falling into the hands of criminals, armed groups, terrorists and others who would misuse them.
